Building a new home should be an exciting experience and it is when the decision making process is custom fit to you.

In custom homes, there are generally 3 types of people:

- 1) Those that love to be involved in all decisions.
- 2) Those that want to see an “Option A” and an “Option B” within their style preference.
- 3) Those that want all the decisions in place.

Which one are you?

At Harval Homes we have a decision making process for each person.

If you like to be involved in all decisions, we have a detailed selection guide that outlines all your decisions along with the dates as to when things need to be selected. Using this guide, together we'll plan your home.

If you prefer to see options within your style preference, we'll coordinate those for you.

If you want all the decisions to be made for you, just give us picture of your home style and wall colour preferences and we'll put together the entire package for you.

However you want your home building process to go, we'll create a process that makes it a great experience.

If you're planning to build a new home, connect with our office, ask for Don Martens and let him develop a custom building process that is right for you.
